C U Service Centers announces plans to move their Midwest City Branch

Oklahoma City, OK – The Credit Union Service Centers of Oklahoma announced plans today to move its Midwest City Branch service center to a new location this summer. The new service center will be located at 232 S. Air Depot, Midwest City, about 5 blocks away from its current site.

The new branch will feature an all new décor, enhanced security features, and improved access and parking. The staff will remain the same but be better equipped to serve their members.

“The previous location on East Reno served us well for 10 years,” said Gary Bartley, President/CEO. “The neighborhood and past service issues made us re-think the location, while allowing us an opportunity to improve parking, vehicle access, and overall convenience for our members. We feel that this move will be an easy transition for credit union members and they will enjoy the new look and feel of a complete re-design of our facility.”

The new branch will have 6 teller windows for member convenience. The window design includes new robber resistant barriers for increased member and employee safety, while offering improved communication and visual detail over typical past installations. The branch manager will have a lobby office to help serve members with specific needs or privacy requirements.

“Member convenience and service issues for all age groups and lifestyles were considered, and several ideas were included in the final design,” said Bartley. “We worked with our supplier for several weeks to develop a service counter with added safety features that is both attractive and member friendly.”

The décor will use soft greens, blues and yellows to brighten the interior and improve visibility for our membership. A new user friendly contemporary look should be appealing to all ages.

The branch is set to be moved in the next 60 days. The opening date will be announced later as construction nears completion.
